

TAILBAILA TRADITIONAL WALL CLIMBING AND RAPPELLING EXPEDITION

The structure of the Sahyadri is due to the lava that came out of the volcanic eruption. After the layers of lava cooled, the layers of lava accumulated one after another due to repeated eruptions. Then, these layers were eroded by sun, wind, and rain, forming unique structures. One of these structures is the "stone wall"; Tail Baila mountain is a good example of such a structure.

A dyke is a wall of basalt rock formed by the accumulation and cooling of lava in a particular way. The Tailbaila mountain is notable for its two such dykes. The Tailbaila wall is approximately 1013 meters / 3322 feet high and runs north-south. There is a "V" shaped notch in the middle of this wall. This has divided the wall into two parts. We will be climbing the Traditional wall of it.*
